

3RD MOKENA EXPLOSION VICTIM DIES

A. MESENBRINK TINLEY MEAT DEALER DIES

August Mesenbrink, aged 62 years who has been associated with his brother-in-law, Fred Hick in the meat market business in Tinley Park, died at his home in Tinley on Tuesday morning. He had been in poor health for some time.

Mr. Mesenbrink was born in Hanover, Germany, April 24, 1878. At the age of 21 years he immigrated to America and came to Bremen township. For a while he worked on farms in the Coopers Grove and Sedan Prairie region. In 1916 he joined with Mr. Hick in opening a meat market in Tinley Park in the same building in which the market is now located.

On March 14, 1908 he was united in marriage with Miss Anna Hick. Surviving are the wife, one son Walter, one daughter, Mrs. Esther Stockman and four grand children, all of Tinley Park.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon from the Hirsch Funeral Home to the Zion Lutheran church with the Rev. Albert Budenhagen officiating. Hundreds of friends, neighbors and customers of the deceased attended the final rites, attesting to the high esteem in which Mr. Mesenbrink had been held by his community.

The floral offerings were profuse and gorgeous.

Many of the floral pieces were from the various firms Mr. Mesenbrink dealt with during his business career.

As a special tribute of respect all the business houses in Tinley Park remained closed during the funeral hour.

Interment was made in the Zion Lutheran cemetery.

Mr. Mesenbrink attained the age of 62 years, one month and ten days.

He had been engaged in the meat business in Tinley for 25 years.

Worthless Check Passer Forced To Make Restitution

A week ago a Chicago WPA worker on the Orland Park school gym project passed two bogus bank checks in Orland and realized $15 in cash from the Barney Moore tavern and $10 in cash from the Paul Oelke garage. When it was discovered that the checks were bogus an investigation revealed that the man had taken blank checks of the Orland State Bank, crossed out the name of the Orland bank and wrote in the name of the First National Bank of Chicago. The matter was turned over to Constable John Heltenhouse of Orland Park. He learned the man had quit the Orland school job but that he had some money coming. He learned when the checks were mailed out and a few days later the man came to the Orland Park post office and he immediately placed him under arrest. When the WPA worker opened the envelope it contained a check for $58. He was compelled to cash the check and make restitution to the persons he had passed the bad checks on besides paying a tavern bill and the constable's fees. After settling these accounts he was released and warned to stay out of Orland Park.

Shoot Air Rifles With Bad Results

Firing air rifles in a village is a very dangerous practice as several Mokena boys have found out. They took shots at birds, but missed them and the shots knocked out window panes in the Wm. Schmuhl home and in the Harold Cooper garage. Stray shots also struck Miss Nora Groth and some small children. The village ordinance provides a penalty for discharging air rifles in the corporate limits of the village and the parents of boys are warned to see to it that their boys refrain from using their air rifles in the village.

Mokena Passes Interim Zoning Ordinance

Last Friday night the Mokena Village Board passed what is known as an interim zoning ordinance for the Village of Mokena. This ordinance regulates trade, home occupation, business or industrial uses until the adoption of a Village Zoning ordinance, requiring permits, establishing a board of appeals and providing for enforcement and penalties for violations. A map is on display in the window of the Mokena Village Hall showing how the Village has been zoned.

Front street from Wolf Road east to the junction of Division street at the Royal Blue Store corner has been zoned for business purposes, but all existing business on the east side of the village along Front St., are not effected by the zoning, but if any of these business places should ever be destroyed by fire or otherwise they could not be rebuilt in the same location as they are now located in the residential district. All the other streets in the village are zoned for residential purposes, but the zoning ordinance is elastic enough so changes can be made by amendments if needed.

The Mokena Oil Co., plant and the Mitchell Brewery are in the industrial zone. A public hearing will be held, the date to be announced, at which the zoning ordinance can be discussed and considered by the public.

"I'll talk English to His Highness," said Rundhia. "The old sheep shall do one useful thing before he dies. You have the poison ready?"

"Yes, but this is a crisis," the Bengali answered. "Are you in a fit condition to control a crisis? To me, you seem very nervous. Let me feel your heart-beat. Why not postpone this until tomorrow?"

"Because tomorrow the old sheep might change his will. I've had a warning from the Resident. By the day after tomorrow, they might already have vetoed my succession to the throne. If he's already dead they'll let me succeed, to save themselves trouble. So poison the old sheep tonight, and take your money and go to the devil. I hope I never see you again. If you fail, I'll take damned good care you hang!"

"There is no risk of failure, unless you are too excited and behave suspiciously."

"Yes, there is," said Rundhia. "You do as I tell you. Be a little late with his tonic, so that he drinks it greedily. I'm going in to see him now. After I come out, you wait until someone else goes in to see him."

"But if no one goes?"

"I will take care that someone does go. If you give it to him in someone else's presence, it will look more innocent. Will he be able to speak after he drinks it?"

"No. It will paralyze his nerves immediately."

"How long will it take him to die?"

"Perhaps ten minutes. Perhaps less. It will appear to be heart failure."

"Very well then. Where's your needle? Give me a strong shot."

"No. Not too strong. You must not get the habit. After this, you will need your faculties and self-control, if we are not to be found out. I will give you just sufficient to steady your nerves."

The Maharajah stared, noted the expression on Rundhia's face when he entered the room and made a warning gesture toward the Punjabi stamp salesman.

"Can he understand English?" Rundhia demanded.

"I believe not."

"Well, I will speak English. If he does understand it, it won't much matter. I want you to call up the Resident and demand the immediate arrest of Captain Norwood!"

"Why?" asked the Maharajah.

"He has not only taken a bribe from the priests, as you already know—"

"I have heard it said."

"You know it's true. And now he has assaulted me. He knocked me out with a punch in the face."

"Were you drunk?" asked the Maharajah. And, before Rundhia could answer: "It would be beneath my dignity to ask the Resident to take official cognizance of a brawl between two drunkards."

CHAPTER XX

Lynn changed from the Indian costume. She entered the Maharane's boudoir in a chiffon evening gown. "Please don't get up, Maharane dear. You treat me as if I were royalty and you a subject or something."

"Why did you change your dress, Lynn? You looked so charming in—"

"Oh, this dress feels more honest somehow. I mean more like my real colors. Maharane dear, I'm afraid I'm all upset. I'm not fit to talk to."

"Lynn dear, what has happened?"

"Rundhia made love to me, and I wasn't even polite to him. Captain Norwood came, and punched Rundhia—he knocked him off the wall. I thought he had killed him. Oh, why do I keep on getting other people into trouble!"

The Maharane's worried face seemed to age under Lynn's eyes: "Lynn, did he hurt Rundhia badly?"

"No, I think not. Rundhia walked away."

"Did you speak to Captain Norwood?"

"Yes, I insulted him. I did it thoroughly. I suppose I shouldn't have, since it was I who injured him. But I couldn't help it. He tore up my letter, so I tore up his. I am not meek by nature. I'm not good at pretending."

"And Rundhia wasn't hurt? You are sure?"

"Captain Norwood went down off the wall to look. It wasn't long before Rundhia walked away. I don't know why he didn't come back and face Captain Norwood, but perhaps he was too stunned by being knocked off the wall. Rundhia didn't behave very well."

"He needs you, Lynn."

Lynn laughed—bitter—contemptuous: "Needs me? I need a friend. Rundhia is—"

"Be strong," said the Maharane. "I am your friend."

"Yes, bless you! Rundhia seemed strong," Lynn said. "And he talked like a perfect lover. I had almost begun to believe he can love. And then something happened. There was shooting—perhaps nothing important—I don't know. I asked Rundhia, and I thought he was lying when he said he didn't know. After that—it was quite sudden—I didn't believe in him any longer. I can't explain it. Then Captain Norwood came."

A servant entered. He announced that Prince Rundhia was waiting.

"Lynn, will you see him?"

"Not alone," Lynn answered.

The Maharane thought a minute: "It is against precedent, against custom. Lynn dear, will you be shocked if I ask Rundhia to come in here to talk to us?"

Lynn found a smile. "I suppose you're afraid he might brag! Let's risk that. I won't tell."

Rundhia strode in. He stood stock-still in the center of the room. He was wearing a blood-red turban and dinner jacket. He looked like the real Rundhia again. Easy to imagine him horsed and riding hard at an enemy. He gazed at Lynn a moment, then at the Maharane:

"Has Lynn told you?" he asked.

"Yes, Rundhia. What did you do to make Captain Norwood strike you?"

Rundhia tossed his head. He looked like a man when he did that.

"Lynn saw. Lynn heard," he answered. "I went at once and de-

You must meet Captain Norwood in my presence, and the Maharane's, and you must say to him personally that you withdraw. I won't ask you to beg his pardon, because I won't do that. I won't speak to him. But I insist on your behaving like a man."

The Maharane spoke suddenly with a ring of command in her voice:

"Rundhia, go to the table and write!"

Rundhia went to the table. Lynn sat down beside the Maharane:

"Maharane dear, you must be my wise friend, for I am all in the dark. I feel so western and so lonely, and I don't know whether I am doing right or wrong. But I will do my best."

"Lynn—"

Lynn interrupted her: "Will you make me a promise? Will you never, never tell Captain Norwood why I married Rundhia? Will you keep it a secret?"

The Maharane was silent for nearly a minute. She was not quite dry-eyed. She spoke suddenly, low-voiced:

"Lynn, do you love Captain Norwood?"

"Maharane dear, I have promised to marry Rundhia."

CHAPTER XXI

Norwood stood stock-still, beneath a Tibetan devil-mask, between two suits of ancient Indian armor. He had sent up his card to the Maharane with a request for an immediate interview. It was an outrageous request, and he knew it. The palace chamberlain approached him, stared—stared harder—hesitated, and then:

"Captain Norwood? We had heard you are dead!"

"Yes. I have been wondering who is sorry I'm not dead. Has the Maharajah heard it?"

"No, I believe not. He is rather inaccessible this evening. And it was only a rumor, unconfirmed yet. It was thought best not to mention it to him prematurely. May I congratulate you on your escape. It was said that criminals attacked your camp. I am sincerely—"

"Thanks."

"Your business at the palace? I think the Maharajah might be pleased to see you. He has a document—"

"I have asked to see the Maharane."

"Oh, impossible! Captain Norwood, please. We have been very unconventional of late, but—"

"Here comes the servant," said Norwood.

The servant delivered his message: the chamberlain accompanied Norwood upstairs as far as the anteroom that led into the Maharajah's study:

"I am sure His Highness will be glad to see you, because of that new document he has discovered. The attendant in the anteroom will announce you. Hee-hee! You may believe it or not, but I wouldn't dare to do it."

"Don't mention my name," said Norwood.

"I wouldn't think of it. The doctor and I are not cronies. I will simply say someone went in. I believe you will be admitted. His Highness spoke of you. I think he really wants to see you."

The chamberlain left him. Norwood was announced. The Punjabi stamp salesman was dismissed, smiling as if he had done good business. The door closed, and Norwood was alone with the Maharajah.

At last the Maharajah spoke: "I am pleased to receive you, Captain Norwood, even though the hour is unusual. You came to speak to me about the—ah—boundary dispute? I have news. Since I saw you, my secretary has found a document which seems to me to make the priests' case so ridiculous that—"

"Oh, I expect to find in the favor of the priests, Your Highness. Those documents may interest lawyers. I am only concerned with the boundary line. I have been accused of accepting a bribe from the priests—"

"Oh! Captain Norwood, you astonish me. Who is your accuser?"

"I supposed you already knew. He will tell you. As a matter of fact, I called on Her Highness the Maharane. I want to speak to Miss Lynn Harding. I have reason to believe that without the Maharane's advice she might refuse to see me until perhaps tomorrow. I need to see her tonight. I hoped to persuade the Maharane to arrange the interview, but she refused, so I came to you instead."

"Is it urgent? Won't you please be seated? Won't you read this document?"

"Your Highness, do you think I would disturb you at this time of night if it wasn't urgent!"

"Oh, well, possibly an interview can be arranged. I will enquire presently. Won't you read that document?"

Norwood smiled agreeably: "I will. As you have reason to know, sir, I'm a bit slow at reading this ancient script."

"I wouldn't care to let that out of my possession," said the Maharajah.

"Suits me," Norwood answered. "I ask nothing better than to sit here for the time being. You will learn why, later."

The Maharajah looked up sharply, but Norwood raised the document between them. He couldn't see Norwood's face:

"You flatter me," he said after a moment.

At last came a knock at the door. The Maharajah tapped the gong with his fingers and the Bengali doctor entered, making his suave professional bow. He was followed by the Maharajah's personal attendant, carrying a big blue goblet on a silver tray. The Bengali eyed Norwood with horror.

"You are late," said the Maharajah. "Why are you late?"

"I was delayed, your Highness."

Norwood had laid down the document. He rose from his chair. He stepped behind the Bengali. He held his right fist ready for emergency and seized the goblet in his left hand. The Bengali stepped back, out of reach of the fist. The Maharajah made a sudden exclamation, not unlike a sheep's bleat. The white-clad servant backed away, showing the whites of his eyes. Norwood held the goblet toward the Bengali:

"Drink it!" he commanded.

The Bengali was speechless. It was several seconds before he could stammer: "Sir, are you mad?"

The Maharajah, with his elbows on the desk, and one hand within reach of the drumstick of the golden gong, leaned forward, staring.

Norwood spoke again quite calmly. But it was a deadly calm. It frightened the Bengali:

"You are, aren't you, the doctor who poisoned Mrs. Harding's toast?"

"Sir, beware whom you slander!"

The Bengali appealed to the Maharajah: "Is Your Highness pleased to hear me slandered by a madman who is known to have been bribed by—"

Norwood interrupted: "Cut that! You heard me. Drink it!"

"That is His Highness' tonic."

"Drink it!" said the Maharajah.

He looked almost happy. He sounded quite calm. But his fingernails drummed on the desk. Not a sign of humor.

'Algae' Worry Scientists Seeking Pure Water Supply

Supplying pure, good-tasting water to a modern city has its ups and downs. One of the biggest "downs" is the sudden appearance of a smell or taste suggesting moldy basements, cucumbers, pig pens or long-dead fishes. This means that algae is in the reservoir and instead of calling the police with a drag-net, the trouble shooters at the water works go hunting with a microscope.

Algae are the simplest and most ancient forms of plant life. They do not bother drinking water as long as they behave themselves. Usually they are taken care of by filtration and other purification. But, like any crowd, there is always a smart aleck or two. That is when the superintendent of the reservoir has his worries.

Nearly every city water system that draws its supply from surface reservoirs must be guarded constantly against sudden invasions of such algae and their relatives, writes Walter E. Burton in Nature Magazine. The chemist at the water works keeps a rogue's gallery of photomicrographs of the offenders. Once they are identified he starts in to round them up—and out.

One of the most offensive algae—Reservoir Enemy No. 1—is Synura Uvella. He is a two-tailed creature that likes to travel in gangs of 50 or so. Such a bunch, magnified 600 times, makes a spot about the size of a quarter. Three of these gangs in a gallon of water will make it taste pretty awful—some say like geraniums; others like dead fish. Synura loves the cold, so is especially offensive in winter.

Anabaena is good-looking algae—under the microscope—with cells arranged in graceful curlicues. However, it creates an odor and taste described as "grassy, moldy and vile." Asterionella adds the delightful touch of a pig-pen odor to the reservoir water, and it, too, is pretty, with its cells arranged like a star.

These and other public water enemies are one reason why you have a water bill to pay. Just as you need a police department to protect you, so you need the men at the water works, particularly the trained chemists, to keep the water pure and tasty.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

A CERTAIN Miss Fixit, and that was not really her name, inherited a house full of furniture that was not old enough to be either quaint or antique. One day she sent for my little Book No. 4, and there she found a sketch showing how to plot a room color plan based on a rug, or a picture, or a piece of drapery material with good coloring. Miss Fixit had a picture that she had always loved because of its beautiful colors. Just for fun, as a sort of game, she made a room color plot based on that picture.

That was really a turning point in the life of Miss Fixit. This old rocker that she made over is merely a sample of what may happen when a clever young lady is bent upon bringing color into her life. The chair has been painted a pale turquoise blue, and the seat cushion and back are covered with an inexpensive chintz in turquoise.

Cheerful News

The house agent decided to be quite frank with his latest client. "Of course," he began, "this house has one or two drawbacks which I feel I must mention. It is bounded on the north by the gas-works, on the south by a rubber works, on the east by a vinegar factory, and on the west there is a glue-boiling establishment." "Good Heavens!!" gasped the client. "What a neighborhood!" "Quite so," replied the agent. But there are advantages. The rent is cheap and you can always tell which way the wind is blowing."

Clever Cutouts for Your Pool or Lawn

"YES Mam, Lilybud, Ah done caught it all by mah ownself, Ah did." Thus Fo' Bits impresses his mastery of fishing upon his lady fair. And Lilybud seems properly impressed—or frightened. 'Tis all in fun though, for both little pickaninnies are designed as cutouts to be placed beside your pool or on the lawn. Jig, coping or keyhole saw will cut them from plywood, and enamel will finish them. They may be used as a pair or singly.

Z9181, 15 cents, brings the pattern for clever little 21-inch Fo' Bits and his turtle. The fishing pole is a stick nailed on. Z9182, 15 cents, is his cute companion, Lilybud, almost as tall. General cutout directions come with each pattern and painting suggestions are given. Send order to:

Safety in Depth
Lowliness is the base of every virtue, and he who goes the lowest builds the safest.—Bailey.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

4-H Club

4-H Club Has Interesting Trip

A number of 4-H club members from Cook county were among the nearly 2000 attending the 18th Annual tour at the University of Illinois, College of Agriculture, June 4 and 5, announced Mr. Chas. N. Glover, assistant farm adviser.

Lucille Benck, of the Merry Maids 4-H club of Worth township, and Elias Plinsky, of the Palatine-Schaumburg 4-H club, participated in the impromptu speaking contest.

Stunts were presented by two Cook county 4-H clubs. One, a pantomime of the song, "In an Old Dutch Garden" by Hilda Wille and Elvira Stuckey of the Sunshine 4-H club. The other a dramatization, "The Old Gray Mare" with the following characters: Ralph Porep, Donald Hill, Elmer Hill and Alfred Helgeson of the Palatine-Schaumburg 4-H club.

The tour this year was somewhat different than last, since it was planned for two days instead of three and the attendance was limited to members 15 years of age or over. The program was planned especially to interest this older group.

Increase Seating Capacity At Arlington Park

There will be no more room for the "railbirds" at Arlington Park hereafter, as well as increased seating accommodations for patrons, Pres. John D. Allen announced today. Workmen are engaged in moving the public guard rail forward about ten feet along the entire length of front stretch, thus creating about 7,500 square feet of new space and bringing the front rows of the grandstand closer to the track. This will provide "railbird" space for 5,000 more spectators and improve the view for another 5,000.

The seating capacity of the unreserved section of the enclosure is being expanded to provide from 1,000 to 3,000 more seats and permanent benches are being placed at the extreme east end of the general or grandstand division.

These and other improvements to the big plant will be completed for opening day, June 24, which ushers in the 61-day co-ordinated programs of Arlington Park and Washington Park in which $900,000 in prize money will be distributed to horsemen.

For years the biggest and best laid out stand in American racing, the Arlington Park plant will seat upwards of 24,000. There are 19,000 seats in the grandstand and 5,000 in the enclosure, the figures including seating in 390 boxes.

Arlington Park's new officials are encouraged with the entire outlook for the coming meeting. Forty-seven of the nation's leading 3 year-olds are eligible for the Classic, which highlights the meeting on July 20. They include the Kentucky Derby winner, Gallahadion; the Preakness winner, Bimelech and the Withers hero, Corydon. The Classic, which will gross about $55,000, comes just three weeks in advance of the American Derby, expected to gross about $60,000.

The feature of opening day is the Inaugural Handicap at seven furlongs which will attract some of the best sprinters in the land. Better racing and better opportunities for the spectator to view it is the watchword of the new management.

Furn W. Underwood Wins Hero Medal

This year's award of a silver Vail Medal goes to a telephone man for rescuing a power company employee from the top of a 30 foot pole where he had been burned and shocked by high voltage wires, it is stated in the current issue of the Bell Telephone news, issued by the Illinois Bell Telephone Company. The telephone man is Furn W. Underwood, a splice helper at Santa Ana, California. He made the rescue during a severe wind and rain storm. For his quick action and courage Underwood receives the silver Vail medal and $250.

Vail medal awards have been made during the past twenty years. Awards are made annually and are provided for by a fund established as a memorial to Theodore N. Vail, former president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, who at the time of his death in 1920 had long been recognized for his conspicuous service in the development of the art of telephony.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alas Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 2.

The Golden Text was, "Sing unto the Lord, praise ye the Lord: for he hath delivered the soul of the poor from the hand of evildoers" (Jeremiah 20:13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up" (James 4:7, 8, 10).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Christian Scientist wisely shapes his course, and is honest and consistent in following the leadings of divine Mind. He must prove, through living as well as healing and teaching, that Christ's way is the only one by which mortals are radically saved from sin and sickness" (p. 458).

MEN ALOFT

The "Flying Rodiecks" Are Birds of a Feather

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

The "Flying Rodiecks" sound very much like a circus act. But, as a matter of fact, the three Rodieck brothers fly much higher and faster than any daring young man on a circus trapeze.

There is Capt. Leonard H. Rodieck, midwest commander of preparatory aviation schools of the United States Army Air Corps; Capt. George E. Rodieck of Mid-Continent Airlines and the "kid brother," Lieut. Ralph W. Rodieck who pilots a "flying fortress" out of March Field for the Army Air Corps.

Before George left to join Mid-Continent the Rodiecks were the only trio of brothers in all of the far flung Army Air Corps. Leonard was the first to sprout wings. He began dreaming about airplanes when he was still in short pants. George and Ralph followed Leonard's example.

Although never stationed at the same airport the brothers easily kept up contacts with each other. When Leonard hopped over to Kelly Field from Shreveport, La., George quickly would arrange a cross-country flight from March Field. Once with a brisk tail wind George really poured on the coal and made the Los Angeles-San Antonio flight in 4 1/2 hours flat.

Aviation everywhere is the shortest distance between two points but in Texas it is an especially vital form of transportation because the "two points" may be 1,000 miles apart and still in the same huge Lone Star state. Leonard, George and Ralph were born in Palestine, Texas, and stretched their necks looking at every plane that flew overhead.

Of the trio George perhaps has had more varied adventures. He entered the Army Air Corps training center at San Antonio, Texas, in June, 1929 and was graduated in June, 1930.

After 16 months of active duty with the Air Corps he left for Central America and two years as a transport pilot flying millions of pounds of freight on some of the world's most important commercial airlines. Returning to the States he flew for Braniff Airways 2 1/2 years and then joined Mid-Continent Airlines.

All three of the Rodiecks have the highest praise for their alma mater, the Army Air Corps training center, and for the Texas climate where cadets spend six months of their nine-month training period. "The best chance for a young man intending to make a career of flying is to learn the Army way," George declared. He got quick supporting testimonials from Brothers Leonard and Ralph.

Information about the self-contained "city" of 3,000 people which has a theatre, chapel, an athletic field, four swimming pools and three clubs, where cadets spend six months of their Army training period, may be obtained from the Commander of the Army Air Corps Training Center at Randolph Field, Texas.

"The only really difficult part of the training period will be in leaving Texas after a cadet gets his wings," George commented. "It's the best state of all."

"That's right," said the loyal brothers.

Douglas B-18 Bombers are a familiar sight on all airports used by the United States Army Air Corps.

Wm. Martin Post No. 725, V. F. W.

An appeal to all business firms and residents of our community to display the American Flag on Flag Day, June 14, is voiced by Wm. Martin Post No. 725, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

Observance of national anniversaries and public education in American history are among the objectives of the nationwide program in Americanism sponsored by more than 3,500 local units of the V.F.W. throughout the country.

Our organization, in cooperation with others, is working hard to combat the un-American influences which today are seeking to undermine public confidence in our form of government.

It has become the fashion, in certain circles, particularly among our country's youth in schools and colleges, to ridicule patriotism and to scorn patriotic service.

By means of an unceasing, constructive program of education, our organization is meeting this crisis by developing in our own membership and in all those with whom we come in contact, a reverence for the American Flag and for the loyal patriots whose sacrifices established this country and made possible its development.

We plan that Flag Day will remind the citizens of this community of the dangers and difficulties overcome by the Stars and Stripes in the one hundred and sixty-three years since its adoption. It will serve to remind us that our flag today is facing dangers as great as it ever faced in battle and that loyal Americans must unite in a determined stand against any influence or enemy force that would rob this nation of its faith in and love for the American flag.

The American flag symbolizes every achievement in American history. It represents the very principles upon which our Constitution and our government are established. We hope that every American flag will be properly hung and on display on the one day of the year given over to a national observance of this important historic event."

The etiquette of the flag is outlined in the following rules as formulated by the first National Flag Conference in 1923:

1. The flag should always be hung with the stars to the upper left.
2. In parades or processions, the American flag should always have the place of honor over other flags—at the right.
3. When raising or lowering a flag at half-mast, the flag should always be raised to the top of the pole, then lowered to the half-staff position.
4. The flag should never be used as a table covering, never be draped or twisted to form decorations, never touch the ground, either when placed on a grave or when being lowered from a staff.
5. To salute the passing of the flag, stand at attention, with hat in right hand over left breast. In uniform, execute the right hand salute. Women stand at attention when saluting the flag.
6. When flags of two or more nations are displayed, they should be placed on separate staffs of the same height. Flags should be of same approximate size.
7. Displaying flags on motor cars or other conveyances is incorrect except when flown from a staff. Do not drape flag over a vehicle.
8. When displayed over the middle of a street, the flag should be suspended vertically with the blue starred union to the north in an east and west street and to the east in a north and south street.
9. When the red, white and blue are desired for use in draping or other decorations, use bunting, not the flag. In such cases, the blue should always be at the top, the red at the bottom.
10. When flags of cities, states or organizations are flown from the same halyard as the American flag, the Stars and Stripes should always be at the peak.

Cook Co. Council American Legion Plans Celebration

The sixth annual Fourth of July celebration of the Cook County Council of The American Legion, featuring a $3,500 fireworks display, lightning warfare by motorized troops, a polo match and circus acts, will be staged at Soldier Field, Chicago, commencing at 7 p.m. on Thursday, July 4.

The three-hour spectacle, eclipsing all previous Fourth of July celebrations of the Legion, is expected to draw 100,000 spectators, according to Wm. J. Collins, council commander. More than 60,000 persons attended the 1939 show.

The program is sponsored by the Cook County Council in the interests of a safe and sane Fourth of July. The celebration makes it possible for young and old alike to witness a magnificent pyrotechnic display without danger to themselves and at the same time to place proper emphasis on the patriotic nature of the occasion.

The military exhibition, staged by a motorized detachment of the Illinois National Guard, will be one of the highlights of the program. It will include a blackout, anti-aircraft defense, and tank and artillery action.

Of equal interest will be a polo match, played by teams of nationally-known players representing New York and Chicago, a drill by the champion drum and bugle corps of Commonwealth-Edison post, American Legion; and a military parade. Eight circus acts also will be presented by a cast of forty entertainers.

Reserved seat admissions will be 75 cents, Commander Collins said. Tickets may be obtained at the Cook County Council headquarters, room 1017, 127 N. Dearborn St. They will also be placed on sale at Marshall Field & Co. and at the Bond Clothing Store.

Saturday afternoon, May 25th at 3:30 o'clock, Miss Leona Jungles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Jungles of Homer became the bride of Walter Meuhler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Meuhler, of Mokena, the wedding taking place in St. Mary's church in Mokena. The attendants were Lucille Lauffer, girl chum of the bride and Howard Jungles, brother of the bride. The bride wore a dress of blue sheer trimmed in lace with a short veil and pink accessories. She carried a bouquet of coral pink roses and blue delphiniums. Dawn of Desire

By FRANK PEARSON

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

TO BE ushered by an office boy who was a model of decorum into DeWitt Wright's private sanctum high above Wall Street was to be immediately conscious of the severe setting that served only to emphasize the austerity of the great financier's expression, so frequently displayed on front pages and rotogravures. There was not a single soft or rounded line in the great, square office room, as there were none in the harshly angled features of DeWitt Wright.

The financier's stenographer-secretary was one of those young women who craved all the things of life that are both beautiful and secure.

She wanted marriage; a home of her own—and children to love and scold. Her name was Jane Warden, and there was something angelic about her.

DeWitt Wright was one of the most eligible and desirable bachelors in New York. Jane Warden was his secretary by reason of her skill and intelligence. How could she surmount this business barrier, and influence him to see her now and then through eyes that would reveal her desirability as a woman and a companion rather than a keen, efficient tool?

One day when Jane was particularly blue over the prospect of drab servitude that stretched before her, she chanced on the formal card of a well-known astrologer in one of the magazines. In one corner of the card appeared this simple line: "Let me help you."

Jane took fifteen dollars from her slim bank account and sought the sacred, incense clouded ante-room of society's pet astrologer. Jane was nothing if not direct.

"I don't want a signed, figured horoscope with all my likes and dislikes. I just want to know one thing—how can I win the man I love?"

Madame Francisco's reputation was not without foundation. She had helped many. She liked this girl's directness.

"Miss—Warden? Sit here in front of me. Tell me the date of your birth, and the hour as nearly as possible—then let me look at you a little while . . . two . . . three minutes."

Jane did as she was bid and the ceremony proceeded. Mme. Francisco's great dark eyes seemed to hold the girl spellbound; her magnetism enfolded Jane in a wealth of sure appraisal.

"You are not human enough," the woman said softly. "Stop being the cold angel your name suggests. Do some little human thing like—oh, anything that will show this man without words that he is always in your thoughts."

DeWitt Wright loved flowers. Aside from his pleasure in it he was vaguely aware that the rose in a slender vase on his desk, every morning fresh and fragrant as dew itself, was in some strange sense a message or an emblem.

But the financier was a busy man, not fashioned for the subtleties of romance, so morning after morning he remained in his state of passivity regarding the rose until the day when he chanced to arrive extraordinarily early. His office door was flung wide and his rubber soled golf oxfords were noiseless on the wide cement approach.

What he saw from his threshold gave him pause. Jane Warden bending over his desk, with the early sunlight from a tall window unsealing gold glints within her trim blonde bob. She was arranging his rose in its receptacle with delicate fingers that, now he thought of it, seemed moulded for caressing. With graceful movements, utterly unaware of the hungry eyes that covered her, Jane stooped and patted into puffiness the flat little leather pillow she had but lately installed in the financier's rigorous desk chair.

Something far alien to his being, something queer and warm stirred in the heart of DeWitt Wright. He pictured this girl in his bachelor palace—arranging flowers, patting pillows, using the wand of youth to turn a solitary domain into an intimate home. Dawn of desire! Acknowledgment of a great lack! He retraced his steps far down from the door as quietly as any cat—then wheeled and entered his office with his accustomed authoritative tread. Jane was sitting ready for dictation—poised at her desk as usual. They exchanged the customary negligent "good morning."

At closing that evening, DeWitt Wright watched Jane Warden straighten her desk, cover her typewriter, sharpen a pencil for the next day, and don a smart hat and tailored jacket. Ideas clashed in his brain. Oh, to say something to her. For the first time in his powerful life words failed him. Sudden terror seized him as she spoke her bright "good night" and approached the door!

She must not go. She could not go. He must unloose the words from his lips; unroot his feet from the floor. DeWitt Wright actually lurched and stumbled as Jane's hand clasped the doorknob.

"JANE!"

Brilliant achievement from DeWitt Wright. But he could not have said more.

Mayor Elected in Safety Campaign Now Plans to Capture Speed Title

Here you see Mayor Ab Jenkins of Salt Lake City, at his desk, and (below) with his son Marv beside the "Mormon Meteor III," in which they will attempt to establish new speed record. Also (top to the right), the Bonneville salt flats. The salt surface is as hard as concrete and perfectly flat. It is the world's fastest speedway, is the claim.

Salt Lake's Chief Magistrate Will Try for World Record
On Salt Flats; Will Also Tour United States.

By RUFUS HARMON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

The unusual spectacle of a mayor of a city of 150,000 driving a racing car at a speed of nearly 200 miles an hour will be enjoyed by several thousand Salt Lake City residents this midsummer. To them, however, it won't be an unusual event at all!

For their mayor is Ab Jenkins, world-famous speed king, who holds more world records than you could shake a stick at.

The odd combination of mayor and speed king is just another chapter in the amazing story of Mayor Jenkins—building contractor, automobile barnstormer, stock-car record breaker, world speed king and now mayor and police commissioner of his own Salt Lake City!

Aids His Livelihood.

Breaking records is no publicity stunt for Jenkins. For many years it's been the means of his considerable livelihood. And inasmuch as the mayor's job in his city doesn't pay a very large salary, Jenkins' world-record attempts this summer will be made for the express purpose of winning prize money to balance the Jenkins' family budget! It is, in other words, his job.

He broke into national prominence in the summer of 1932 when he drove 24 hours, without relief, to set a new world's record for that time and distance. This annoyed the American Automobile association contest board considerably. As a matter of fact, they refused to believe it at all. So the next summer he returned to the same speed site—the now world-famous Bonneville Salt Flats in western Utah—and with the watchful eye of the AAA on him, proceeded to do the same thing and raise his own record.

So far as speed is concerned, this is far from a climax to his spectacular career. For he intends, before he hangs up his goggles, to bring the world's land speed record to America.

Aiming at 400 Miles.

There's quite a story behind these flats. Jenkins first drove a car on them in 1926, and was so certain that here was the ideal speed course that he finally badgered an automobile company into letting him try for the world's record which he set in 1932. Then, with bigger things in sight, he labored unceasingly and at his own expense to get Sir Malcolm Campbell to bring his Bluebird out to try and reach the then undreamed of speed of 300 miles an hour. Campbell finally came in 1935, and the result is now familiar history. Campbell did better than 301 miles an hour and was followed by two of his countrymen, Cobb and Capt. George Eyston, who between them have pushed the land speed record to its altitudinous 367 miles per hour figure.

Now Jenkins wants that—and he's aiming at 400 miles an hour!

Just to give you an idea of what Jenkins has done in the way of speed, he has a list of achievements that is almost unbelievable. In his time, he has broken more than 2,000 records, some of them many times.

The Passing Show

Twenty-two years ago Joseph J. Powell, Milwaukee, braved gunfire at Cantigny, France, to deliver a message to the American troops. Last week he was given a medal for it.

Motherless and fatherless Victor Sienkiewicz, 17, of Chicago, was scolded by his older brothers for playing truant from school. That night he hanged himself.

Motor for $2,800? Nix!

This Mayor Has a Spare

No orthodox mayor is Salt Lake City's Ab Jenkins.

The fire department needed a new motor for one of its hook-and-ladder wagons. A requisition for the motor was brought to the mayor's desk.

"Nothing doing," said he. "Twenty-eight hundred dollars is too much. I've got a motor the department can have."

Ab wouldn't take money for it, either. He turned the motor over to the city as a gift—and was genuinely surprised the newspapers gave the story a big play.

He now holds 294 world speed records. He is the only American to hold any world speed records.

Makes Tours for Safety.

Most of these have been made in his revolutionary series of "Mormon Meteor" cars. His present car of the series is the "Mormon Meteor III," in which he believes he can travel better than 200 miles an hour. Mechanically it embodies new ideas from tip to stern—a 700-horsepower giant that is the racing mayor's brain child in every respect.

But this is only one angle to the amazing achievements of the Salt Lake City mayor. For years he has toured the nation in the interests of safety. He speaks with authority, for he has driven nearly 2,000,000 miles without an accident of any kind!

It was on a safety platform, as a matter of fact, that he was elected mayor. That happened last November when from a popular vote of more than 43,000 he won his position by a margin of only 51 votes! As mayor, he is also commissioner of public safety—and since he took office Salt Lake City is witnessing a thorough renovation of its police and fire departments!

Plans Good Will Tour.

Not, however, along political lines. "I don't know anything about politics," Jenkins says, "and I don't intend to learn. This is a nonpartisan city government, and the only people I'm indebted to are those who elected me. They're entitled to the best I can give them, and that's what I'm going to try and give them."

In addition to his world record runs on the Salt Flats this summer, the mayor also is planning a little jaunt across the country as a purely goodwill gesture. In making this trip, he will start at the New York World's fair, finish at the San Francisco World's fair, and between these two spots will greet mayors of 106 cities. At each stop, he'll invite the mayor to come to Salt Lake City, "The Center of Scenic America."

The trip will be interrupted briefly at Indianapolis, where Jenkins has been accorded the coveted honor of driving the pace car that officially starts the annual Indianapolis Speedway's 500-mile Memorial day classic.

Jenkins' car is built to travel in a circle, for on the Bonneville Salt Flats he drives continuously around a 12½ mile course. Its body is set off center to assist steering.

This trip was inspired by an earlier adventure of Mayor Jenkins. In 1926, he broke the cross-country automobile record. He piloted a car from New York to the Golden Gate in 86 hours.

"I didn't have time to stop and shake hands with any mayors on that trip," he said, "so I think it's only fair to go back and tell them all hello this time."

Eleanor Makes As Much as F. D.

But Most of Mrs. Roosevelt's Pay Goes to Charity.

By DREW PEARSON
and ROBERT ALLEN

Not many people realize it, but Mrs. Roosevelt makes about as much money as her husband—and gives most of it away. Her last income tax statement contained a list, three and a half pages long, of the individuals and organizations to whom she made donations.

Topping the list was the American Friends Service committee, to which she has gave, over the past seven years, a total of $100,000. And she now plans to give them $30,000 more.

Principal source of her revenue, past and present, is radio. When she broadcast for her latest Underprivileged sponsor, she was 3-year-old Joan, paid $3,000 for one of Mrs. Roosevelt's "adopted" children. She never saw the money, however, it being paid directly to the Friends organization each week.

Ham Fish Objects.

On a new radio program, Mrs. Roosevelt declined to reveal the exact amount of this revenue, but she plans to pay off a Friends Service deficit of $30,000.

In this case, however, the Friends Service committee will not get all the revenue. Congressman Ham Fish has seen to that. Roosevelt's "good neighbor" (Fish lives near Hyde Park) howled on the floor of the house two years ago that Mrs. Roosevelt was evading payment of income tax. He insisted that she should list all income, whether she received it or not, and pay tax on it.

So Mrs. Roosevelt's present practice is to list all income, pay tax on it, and donate the balance. This cuts heavily into her donations, since internal revenue exempts only 15 per cent of charitable donations.

Few Made Public.

Undisclosed, except to the internal revenue bureau, are hundreds of small organizations and individuals who get from $10 to $1,000 from Mrs. Roosevelt. She has even expanded her secretarial staff to take care of requests from the thousands of people who think she is the fountain-head of private charity.

Only occasionally are these gifts made public, as when the "Foster Parents Plan for War Children" revealed that she had pledged to care for a young Polish girl, Janina Dybowska, in a French refugee camp, at a cost of $9 a month.

Able to make in a single week more than most men earn in a year, Mrs. Roosevelt is not growing wealthy. She balances her budget by giving away practically every dollar she makes.

When the war began, Mrs. Roosevelt told the Red Cross to put her down for a regular contribution of $50 a month for relief in Europe. She made the same commitment to the American Friends Service committee, this being over and above the weekly thousands which it gets from her new radio program.

And for years, Mrs. Roosevelt has poured thousands into the home-stead project at Arthurdale, W. Va., where the school depends almost entirely on her support. Meetings of the school board are held as her guests in the White House.

Where Statues Wore Hats! Mystery of Easter Island

Science Finds Creators of Intricate Script
Were 'Long-Eared' Artists.

ON EASTER DAY, 1722, the Dutch Admiral Roggeveen landed on a small Pacific island, which he named after the day. He must have thought that he was landing in a nightmare, for the shores were ringed with gigantic stone statues, wearing tall red hats, and standing on high platforms with their backs to the sea. And the whole island was literally covered with statues! They still stand there today.

Later visitors made further odd discoveries. It seemed that the inhabitants had suffered a devouring national passion for sculpture. Hardly a boulder or an outcrop of rock had not been turned into an enormous bust, a fantastic head with enormously long ears. At the same time, they discovered wooden tablets and other objects covered with a complicated script.

This started a series of the most extraordinary theories, including suggestions that Easter island had been occupied by Red Indians, Egyptians, and the lost tribes of Israel. But nobody managed to put forward a reasonable explanation of how this diversity of races got there, or went away when their work was done!

Long-Eared Artists.

Then science took a hand. First of all, local legends were investigated, and the islanders told of a migration in the past from a distant island in the west. Proof came from one of the Gambier islands, over a thousand miles away, in the form of another legend. It told of a defeated chief setting sail to find a new home for his people. Local legend also told of two distinct races inhabiting Easter island, the "long ears" and the "short ears." And here again, science found the proof; for skulls found on Easter island show

One Step

The sublime and ridiculous are often so nearly related that it is difficult to class them separately. One step below the sublime makes the ridiculous, and one step above the ridiculous makes the sublime again.—Thomas Paine.

Life is a series of surprises, and would not be worth taking or keeping if it were not.—Emerson.

that migrants came, not only from the Pacific islands, but also from the Australasian islands.

The "long ears" were the artists. It was their tribal custom to stretch the lobes of their ears, and they wore hats for ceremonial purposes. They were the creators of the intricate script which cannot be read, but, defeated by the "short ears," they have faded away and left no one to tell their story.

So far science can speak with authority, but science cannot say why the islanders who migrated to Easter island should have progressed so far beyond those of their race who inhabit other islands.

Indications are that Roosevelt's foreign policy may force him into accepting a third term... Lack of skilled machinists in America a hazard to America's safety.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON. — Just about a month ago a distinguished western senator, speaking to a small group of friends in Washington, said that there were just two candidates for the presidency on whom he felt the people of America could rely to keep the United States out of the war. On the Democratic side, he said, was Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, while on the Republican side it was Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg.

The senator was not trying, in that particular chat, to drum up votes for either man. He was simply expressing his personal view of the situation.

Even at that time Germany had invaded Norway and Denmark, though there was no knowledge—only fear—that the Nazis would invade the low countries.

But the senator's main point was that here in the East we did not understand sentiment out beyond the

Wheeler

Vandenberg

Mississippi, where the people, he declared, desperately wanted to keep out of Europe's mess.

WESTERN SENTIMENT

In all the western country, he said, sentiment was set in most states against the Roosevelt administration because of the feeling that Roosevelt was far from neutral—that he was obviously pro-ally—and there was fear that the steps he might take to help Britain and France might result eventually in dragging this country into the war.

The importance of all this now is that by the same token there is very little chance of either convention nominating a man who is not known to be pro-ally.

At the present moment there is a decided swing of Washington opinion about the third term. A month ago most of the men and women close to Roosevelt were saying he would not take it. In fact the stock of Cordell Hull, on whose shoulders the President was expected to drape his mantle, was very high.

This writer has always expected the President to accept a renomination. He has always expected circumstances to be such that the President could not refuse to accept it. But if Mr. Roosevelt does take it now no one will ever know whether the reasoning on which that conclusion was based was sound or not.

Nobody who is not pro-ally can be elected President this fall!

NEED TRAINED MEN

The crying need in any preparedness program in this country is skilled machinists. That has also been the bottleneck in Britain and France. The United States does not have enough skilled machinists for a mild boom in our ordinary domestic cycles of prosperity and depression. It is shockingly short of them for filling the war orders of Britain and France.

It will be even shorter if, in addition to doing this job, our domestic plants must turn out planes and munitions, guns and other war supplies for our own preparedness program, which is now virtually decided upon, since there is not enough opposition to the military appropriations asked for by the President to even slow up the machinery on Capitol Hill.

It takes some time to turn out a good machinist, but that is not the real difficulty. The real difficulty will come when it is actually planned to train young men to be machinists, and the objections will come from the labor unions.

LIFE RELIEF STRAIN

Admitting that the interests of men who are now machinists may be hurt after the war is over if enough men are trained to be machinists now to satisfy the demand, there is another factor which is important for two reasons.

That factor is that there is a tremendous number of young men in this country today who want jobs, but who have no particular qualification for any special job. These young men, personally or through their families, are obviously a heavy strain on the relief system. Their training as machinists, by the government perhaps, would be lifting a huge burden from the relief strain.

The other, of course, is that we are going to need this vastly increased number of machinists for some time to come. If the war in Europe lasts—if the allies can stave off a German victory long enough to get ready to fight—the need for them is obvious.

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezekiel 33:7-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.—Romans 14:12.

Personal responsibility is a subject well worthy of careful and repeated consideration. We talk so much about social, national or racial responsibility that we are prone to forget that the social order, nations and races, are made up of individuals. The Bible, while recognizing the relationship and responsibilities of nations and social groups to God, rightly stresses individual responsibility. It is man who is made in the likeness and image of God. He is the one who has fallen into sin, and he needs the regenerating grace of God in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is man who stands responsible to God, both as an individual and as God's representative in carrying His message to others.

I. Man's Responsibility for the Lives of Others (vv. 7-11).

Ezekiel had the official responsibility of a watchman sent by God to his own people in their captivity in Babylon. His was a special calling, and yet it is not true that, according to the teaching of the New Testament, every Christian is called to be a witness, a winner of souls, and a watchman?

1. The Watchman's Commission (v. 7). His appointment is by God, and the warning words he is to speak are given to him by God. Every true preacher and teacher of the gospel should be a God-called man, presenting the Word of God. Otherwise, his ministry will have little meaning and no real power. The same is true of every Christian; a personal touch with God must precede his efforts to win others to God.

2. The Watchman's Responsibility (vv. 8, 9). Being a watchman is not a duty that one bears lightly, for it has grave responsibilities. Lives are dependent on the vigilance and faithfulness of the watchman. Even those who watch over worldly goods or who guard the safety and comfort of others are held by us to a high measure of responsibility and are liable for misfeasance or carelessness in office. What about those of us to whom the destiny of eternal souls has been committed? Read the solemn words of verses 8 and 9.

3. The Watchman's Message (vv. 10, 11). The Jews who were in captivity because of their sin and failure were despondent. They saw no ray of hope; they were under the overwhelming burden of their sin. The message of God's watchman was one of hope to the repentant people. God is gracious toward the sinner and has no pleasure in punishing him. "Why will ye die?" places the responsibility squarely where it belongs—on the sinner himself.

II. Man's Responsibility for His Own Life (vv. 12-16).

Whatever may be our responsibility for the lives of others, certain it is that we must each one answer to God for our own lives. Ours is the glorious opportunity of living our life—and ours is the responsibility for it.

1. Consistent Living Required (v. 12). This verse evidently does not mean that a righteous man overtaken in a moment of defeat is lost. It rather refers to the one who has made an outward show of being righteous. Confident of himself, he has then fallen into careless living, and all at once his true character is revealed in outright wickedness. That man cannot then draw on his past record as though it were a bank account to be used to justify him in his hour of failure. Righteousness is a matter of the heart. It is a spiritual rebirth, expressing itself in changed conduct and consistent living, not only yesterday and today, but also tomorrow.

2. Real Repentance Accepted (vv. 13-16). God was ready in Ezekiel's day to accept the genuinely repentant man and woman. Infinitely more precious and warm is the welcome that Christ now gives to sinners who turn to Him, for He, our blessed Lord, has now worked out the way of salvation on Calvary's tree.

'In' Not 'For'

Am I to thank God for everything? Am I to thank Him for bereavement, for pain, for poverty, for toil? . . . Be still my soul; thou hast misread the message. It is not to give thanks for everything, but to give thanks in everything.—Dr. G. Matheson.

They Shall Return to the Lord
And the Lord shall smite Egypt; he shall smite and heal it; and they shall return even to the Lord, and he shall be entreated of them, and shall heal them.—Isaiah 19:22.

Selfishness

What makes selfishness such a deadly sin is that it is such a self-deceiving one.

Household News By Eleanor Howe

IF YOU'RE ENTERTAINING THE BRIDE (See Recipes Below)

No sooner is the June bride back from her honeymoon, than the business of cooking for two begins! Feeding her new husband will be an important part of the bride's responsibility, and any of the successful homemakers she knows can tell her that perfectly cooked meals for a hungry husband help to keep the matrimonial ship sailing merrily along.

So, why not a kitchen shower for a bride—using for gifts the inexpensive little "gadgets" that will make her hours in the kitchen pleasant? Those are the things the bride isn't likely to buy herself and the very fact that they are small and inexpensive means that she isn't apt to get them, either, among her wedding gifts.

Small, matching pottery pots for chives and parsley to grow on a sunny kitchen window sill, make a thoughtful gift for a kitchen shower; a set of pastel tinted bowl covers is practical and very moderately priced; butter paddles, a french potato ball cutter and small earthenware pots for baking beans are out-of-the-ordinary kitchen gifts. Any bride will bless you for starting her kitchen library for her—with her own copies of my homemaking booklets; Better Baking, Easy Entertaining, Feeding Father and Household Hints.

And speaking of a kitchen library—why not start a collection of favorite recipes for the bride? Have each guest at the shower bring her very choicest recipe, neatly written on a card for the bride's new recipe box, with the donor's name and the date of the party just for fun. Give her the recipes, too, that make up the menu for the day.

Food, for a kitchen shower, should be "homey," and informally served—and planned to give the bride suggestions for her own cooking and baking problems.

Menu for a Kitchen Shower.
Noodle and Tuna Casserole
Spring Vegetable Salad with French Dressing
Butter
Orange Rolls
Cheese Scones
Angel Food Cake
Strawberry Sherbet
Coffee
Fresh Strawberry Sherbet.
(Serves 6.)

Combine 1 cup of crushed strawberries and 2 tablespoons of lemon juice. Scald 1 pint of milk, add $\frac{3}{4}$ cup of sugar and stir until dissolved. Soak 1 tablespoon of unflavored gelatin in 1 tablespoon of cold water for 5 minutes and dissolve in hot milk. Add 2 beaten egg yolks, blend, and remove from flame and cool. Add fruit mixture to milk mixture and fold in 2 beaten egg whites. Assemble ice cream freezer. Pour sherbet mixture into the freezing container. Adjust dasher and cover tightly. Then fill the ice chamber with a mixture of 3 parts whipped ice and 1 part salt and turn crank slowly for about 5 minutes to freeze. Repack and allow to harden.

Orange Rolls.
(Makes 18-20 rolls)
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar
1 teaspoon orange peel (grated)
 $\frac{2}{3}$ cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
4 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk
3 tablespoons butter (melted)
Mix $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar and orange peel thoroughly and allow to stand while making rolls. Sift and measure the flour, then sift together the flour, baking powder, salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Cut in the shortening. Beat the egg slightly and add the milk. Stir into the flour mixture. Turn onto a lightly floured board and knead 30 seconds. Shape into a long narrow roll and roll out into a rectangle to about $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch thickness. Spread the dough with the melted butter and the sugar and orange peel mixture. Roll up like jelly roll and cut off in $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch pieces. Place rolls, cut side down, on a well-greased pan and bake about 20 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees).

Barbecued Steak. (Serves 6.)

2 pounds round steak
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons vinegar
 $\frac{3}{4}$ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon onion, grated
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon chili sauce
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon brown sugar

Cut steak into pieces for serving and sear in frying pan. Melt butter, add vinegar and all other ingredients. Heat thoroughly and pour over the seared steaks. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately 1½ hours. Baste frequently with barbecue sauce while baking.

Prize Angel Food Cake.

$\frac{1}{2}$ cups sugar
1 cup cake flour
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cups egg whites
 $\frac{3}{4}$ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Sift sugar once. Add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup of it to the flour and sift together 3 times. Beat egg whites with rotary beater until frothy, add salt and cream of tartar and continue beating until eggs hold their shape. Add sugar gradually, beating thoroughly after each addition. Add vanilla extract. Then fold in the flour, $\frac{1}{4}$ at a time. When all flour is in, fold a few additional times. Then place in large ungreased angel-food pan. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees) for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Invert and let cool in pan.

French Dressing.
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup salad oil
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup lemon juice or vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
Paprika to color
Few grains cayenne
Place ingredients in covered jar. Chill thoroughly. Just before serving shake vigorously. There are many ways to vary french dressing. The acid may be lemon juice, vinegar, or half and half. A few drops of onion juice may be added, or shake a cut garlic clove with the dressing (removing it before serving). Dry mustard may be added. Worcestershire sauce may also be added, as may creamed roquefort cheese.

Cheese Scones.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon paprika
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup shortening
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup American cheese (grated)
 $\frac{3}{4}$ cup milk
2 teaspoons prepared mustard

Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt and paprika. Cut in shortening. Add cheese. Then add milk and prepared mustard which have been mixed together. Roll out to $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch thickness on lightly floured board. Cut in triangles and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for about 20 minutes.

Percolated Coffee.

Allow 1 tablespoon ground coffee to each cup of water. Place coffee in strainer part of percolator. Add cold water. Adjust top. Heat until coffee just begins to percolate. Then turn heat very low and allow coffee to percolate slowly 8 to 10 minutes. Do not boil.

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

Strained honey, mixed with cottage cheese, a few broken nut meats and soft butter makes a delicious filling for sandwiches for the school child's lunch box.

When refilling a feather pillow crush a small block of camphor and mix in with the feathers. This will keep the feathers "fresh" and will help to preserve them.

To protect the surrounding wall when cleaning electric light switch plates, cut a hole the size of the plate in a piece of cardboard or heavy paper and lay it on the wall so that just the plate is exposed.

After a blanket has been washed and dried pin it on the line and beat with a carpet-beater. This makes the blanket beautifully soft and fluffy.

When lighting a birthday cake always light the candles in the middle first and those on outside last.

A teaspoon of mixed pickle spices tied in a small bag and added to the water in which fish, ham or tongue is boiled, will add a very pleasing flavor.

McCormick-Deering Mowers

Have Always Been Good and the No. 7 Enclosed Gear Mower Is the Best Yet

Come in and go over the entire mower. You'll agree that you have never seen anything like it.

WE ARE anxious to have all our friends see the McCormick-Deering No. 7 Enclosed-Gear Mower. We think it is one of the finest pieces of farm equipment we have ever sold!

For example: The entire operating mechanism, including drive gears, differential, and countershafts, is assembled compactly in an oiltight gear housing and runs in a bath of oil. There are ten high-grade roller bearings, six on the main axle and four on the countershaft. Operation is so smooth and noiseless that you can scarcely hear the light hum of the sickle!

Special oil seals at the ends of the main axle and flywheel shaft, and the oiltight gear box prevent leakage and protect all working parts against the entrance of dirt and other abrasive materials. Floating action of cutter bar provides ample play without disturbing knife registration.

This compact nest of enclosed gears runs in a bath of oil—a full gallon. The cover, B, makes the gear case dust-proof and oil-tight. Clutch is thrown in and out by lever, A.
